Durham—Evening. The hill of Durham is a fair place, "beautiful for situation," and was doubtless, in its palmy days, the joy of the countryside. The noble Cathedral dates from the golden age of church building—the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth centuries—while the Castle, once the stronghold and palace of the Bishops of Durham, dates back to the Norman Conquest. The view of these magnificent buildings in the fiery glow of the setting sun affords a superb and glorious spectacle.
